India supplies almost 20 per cent of the medicines consumed by the world. Every third tablet in the US market is from India.

Recent policy flip-flops have, however, dented India's image as the 'pharmacy of the world'. Industry sources reveal that Indian embassies in Europe, Africa, and other Asian countries have been fire-fighting and reassuring them of no future supply disruptions. "In the past one and a half month, we have improved our exports and the government, too, has relaxed curbs on exports. A lot of damage control has been done," said an ...
